Turkish National Struggle, in which the basis of the main principles of Republic of Turkey were determined, is undoubtedly the most important era in recent Turkish History. As it is known, the year 1919 constitutes the most important process of the organization of the National Struggle. In this process, while many parts of the country were occupied, the foundations "National Independence Movement" were laid. Starting with Mustafa Kemal Pasha's transition to Anatolia as the 9th Army Troops Inspector on May 19, 1919, the aims, methods and objectives of the National Struggle were determined, with the Amasya Circular and subsequent Erzurum and Sivas Congresses. As 2019 is the 100th anniversary of all these important events, Within the framework of a symposium on military, political and social developments during the National Strugale Period, the communiqués based on new comments and findings were discussed.
